The Community Pollinator Project grant has had great success in positively impacting communities across North Dakota! These pollinator projects directly engaged elementary and high school students in conservation by inviting them into the outdoors to plant pollinator habitat firsthand. All participants were taught the importance of habitat and wildlife conservation through fun and meaningful activities and lessons. Each projects instilled an awareness and understanding of quality habitat needs on North Dakota's landscape, while imparting what we can all do to play a role in creating more of it. Educational games and lessons were a part of each project which helped us bring awareness to the importance of habitat, pollinators, and conservation. Participants will be able to revisit these pollinator projects to see the benefits they're providing as well as to have continuing education in our natural resources, ecosystem services, and biology lessons. We can't thank the Outdoor Heritage Fund enough for the support in making these projects possible and for helping us instill a conservation ethic in our next generation while also creating quality pollinator habitat.
